

Branch of law

A set of legal norms regulating a given area of life, formed in the course of history. The basic division of law is the division into private law (regulating the rights of the individual, personal and property rights) and public law (serving to protect the interests of the state as the common good of all citizens). The most important branches of law are: constitutional law, civil law, criminal law, labor law.