

Forms of committing a crime

In criminal law, the forms in which a prohibited act may be committed, and to which the law attaches criminal liability. The forms of committing a crime can be divided into: 1. phenomenal forms of crime – perpetration and non-causative phenomenal forms, i.e. incitement and aiding and abetting; 2. stadial forms of the crime – preparation, attempt, execution.